THE BICYCLES ARE COMING, THE BICYCLES ARE COMING ... but unfortunately there aren't too many safe places for them to go. Now a group of Carmel and Carmel Valley residents, led by high school teacher Lewis DiStefano, are circulating petitions in an effort to get paved bike lanes along both shoulders of Carmel Valley Road. The matter will be discussed by the Board of Supervisors on Oct. 27, and DiStafano hopes to convince county officials that riding along rocky shoulders strewn with bits of glass, as he and students Tod Weir and Steve Chaney are doing above, is hazardous to both motorist and cyclist. Peddling smoothly along a paved stretch of shoulder at the left are Mike Anderson, Tod Weir, Steve Chaney, Celeste Medkeff, Connie Willert and Susan Weimer. For story and pictures of hazards encountered by cyclists along Carmel Valley Road, see pages 18 and 19.

GARDENING TIPS

... FROM THE CARMEL VALLEY GARDEN ASSN.

If you have not as yet fertilized your lawn, don't put it off any longer. Remove the leaves and then rake the lawn vigorously to remove the dead grass and thatch. The thatch, if left on, will form a mat that will prevent the fertilizer and water from penetrating to the root area.

There is a special hand rake made for this purpose and can be purchased from most hardware or garden supply stores, or you can rent a power machine that will do the job, on the average sized lawn, in a few hours.

Mow the lawn before applying the fertilizer, then water thoroughly. The leaves, grass clippings and thatch should be places in the compost pit along with the other garden rubbish you will collect during your fall cleanup of the garden. The finished compost when applied as a mulch at the base of your shrubs and trees will be very beneficial in conserving moisture, etc.

If you plan on planting some trees or shrubs in your garden, fall is an ideal time. The heat of last summer has passed but the soil is still warm and the plant roots will develop before the winter months and will benefit from the rains.

During the winter months there will be little or no top growth, but beneath the soil the roots will continue to grow and with the coming of spring the root systems will be well developed and the top growth will be off to a good start. But a word of caution! Here in the Valley, any tree, shrub or other valued plant should be planted in a "gopher basket." This is a cylinder, closed at the bottom, and made of one inch poultry mesh or "chicken wire." This can be purchased in desired lengths and shaped to form a basket or, if you prefer, the finished basket can be obtained at most nurseries. Skip the "gopher basket" and you will invite some gopher to a tasty meal.

The Carmel Valley Garden Association meets at 8 p.m. on the second Thursday of the month at the multipurpose room of the Tularcitos Elementary School on Ford Road. Why not attend these meetings where we can discuss our mutual problems. All are welcome. We will be looking forward to seeing you.

The Rhyming Philosopher

MATURITY

To everyone there comes a time to learn
That things are not exactly what they seem,
Especially ourselves when we discern
Some contradictions with our self-esteem.

We think we're wise and knowing, good and kind,
A boon to her we've chosen for a mate,
Until we overhear that she's resigned
To tolerate a disappointing fate.

Imagining we lead in civic pride,
We thrust ourselves in front when Progress stirs,
Though people whisper, "If he'd step aside
The way'd be clear if something good occurs."

We're free with our advice to younger folk,
And cite our own accomplishments in school,
Unheeding such remarks as we provoke
Like, "Who's he think he is, the senile fool!"

So when my sojourn here concludes its cares,
I'll be remembered, or forgotten, too,
As one who kept his nose out of affairs
He had no business in; so wouldn't you?

Higher taxes assured for areas not in Fire Protection Districts

Carmel Valley residents living west of Rancho Fiesta Road -- with the exception of those in county service area 43 -- can expect to pay more money for fire protection in the near future.

This was the clear message yesterday from the County Board of Supervisors after discussion of AB 2093, a new bill that, in effect, requires every property owner to pay his full share of the tax bill for fire protection.

This has a direct bearing on several areas of Monterey County, where residents have been provided with minimum fire protection from the State Division of Forestry on an annual contract basis paid by the entire county.

As of July 1, 1971, property owners within a fire district will no longer be required to subsidize fire protection for areas served by the State Division of Forestry.

Almost all residents of mid-and-lower Carmel Valley, with the exception of Del Mesa Carmel, Hacienda Carmel, Rancho Rio Vista and the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center, will be faced with these alternatives:

1. Paying increased taxes in one form or another for their existing fire protection from the State Division of Forestry on Carmel Hill; or

2. Forming their own separate fire district, as the upper Valley did years ago; or

3. Annexing to another fire district; or

4. Forming their own county service area to enter into their own contract with the State Division of Forestry.

Supervisor Warren Church of North County, which is also affected by AB 2093, said he considers it essential for property owners and county officials to start developing alternative plans as quickly as possible so that no area will be left without fire protection starting next July.

The idea of forming an overall county service area to provide fire protection was rejected by County Counsel William Stoffers. Stoffers said he didn't think it would be possible to form such a complex district without tremendous expense and effort for the County Surveyor's office.

NEW DIRECT TAX?

He said he is still checking out the legality of using other sources for revenue for fire protection, such as levying a specific tax on the areas involved. He said a legal question remains whether or not this can be done without setting up a special fire district or county service area, and he will report back to the board on this as soon as possible.

Prior to yesterday's board meeting, Church said he was hopeful that taxes from special sources, such as the real property transfer tax, sales tax, license taxes, alcoholic beverage taxes etc. could be used to pay for fire protection on a contract basis with the State.

All this new attention to fire districts comes just two months after the collapse of an attempt to annex most of the mid-and-lower Carmel Valley to the existing Carmel Valley Fire Protection District.

The annexation effort was started by several property owners in Tierra Grande who wanted to establish a substation in the mid-Valley area. This led to a series of hearings before the Local Agency Formation Commission in Salinas, where the proposal ran into vehement opposition from several large property owners who did not want an increase in property taxes.

When confronted with this strong opposition, directors of the Carmel Valley Fire District withdrew their approval of the annexation proposal. Opponents of annexation assured LAFC that they would study alternative proposals to improve fire protection for mid-and-lower Carmel Valley, but so far no new suggestions have been released publicly.

NO NEW PLAN

Col. Charles J. Daly of Tierra Grande is heading an informal group studying the matter. When asked last week if his group was making any progress on new suggestions for fire protection, he replied,"No comment. I have nothing to say." He declined to state if, when or how any new ideas on fire protection would be brought out for public consideration. He said he did not plan to attend yesterday's board of supervisors meeting.

One person who did attend was William Brown of Meadows Road, one of the strong advocates of annexation to the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District. Brown, an insurance agent, said before the meeting that rates for fire insurance are rising sharply on property in zone 10 areas, which is the classification for almost all mid-Valley property.

Brown added that the disastrous fires which have swept the state recently will undoubtedly be reflected in increased rates for high-risk areas.

"With AB 2093 now law, there's no doubt that people in this part of the Valley will be paying more money for fire protection," he said. "The only question is whether they will simply pay more for the little protection they have now, or pay enough to support a fire station where it's needed in the mid-Valley."

TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor,

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Carmel Valley Fire Department want to express their appreciation for the fine publicity your paper gave our Flea Market.

We would also like to say thank you to everyone who donated to the flea market and helped make it such a success!

Sincerely,
ROSEMARY ROBERTS
President

THE TOWN CRIER

THE COMMITTEE for Peace and Quiet hopes to have a hearing before the County Planning Commission in the near future to appeal the decision of the County zoning administrator regarding the Carmel Valley airstrip. Zoning Administrator Robert Slimmon told the Board of Supervisors two weeks ago that the airstrip as now operated by Mr. and Mrs. Al Hood does not violate any County zoning ordinances. Slimmon noted at the time that any new buildings would require application for a use permit if they were directly related to the operation of the airstrip.

Attorneys for the Committee for Peace and Quiet, Sean Flavin and William Callender, recently met with Slimmon, who reaffirmed his previous position.

CARMEL MIDDLE SCHOOL'S first parent-faculty Club meeting will be held Tuesday, Oct. 20, at 7:30 p.m. in the school gymnasium. This will be an open house to give parents an opportunity to meet teachers and get an overall view of the school's program.

Officers for the coming year are Mrs. Mike Dormody, president; Mrs. Charles Snorf, vice-president; Mrs. Gordon Harlander, secretary; Mrs. Walter Spear, treasurer; Mrs. Michael Elliott, hospitality; Mrs. Rex Pryer, publicity; and Mrs. Edward Tolleson, membership.

xxx

REPRESENTING Carmel Valley Resorts on the board of governors of the Monterey Peninsula Visitors and Convention Bureau will be Ed Haber, manager of Quail Lodge and the Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club. Nick Lombardo, owner of Rancho Canada Golf Course, was also elected as a member-at-large.

xxx

OUR LADY OF MT. CARMEL Parish Guild will hold its monthly meeting at noon next Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Gertrude Stoney, 264 W. Carmel Valley Road. A salad luncheon will be served for $2.00. The guest speaker will be Mrs. Ann Syer, a certified grapho-analyist, who will explain and demonstrate her field of study.

Reservations should be made in advance by calling Lynda Middleton at 659-4048.

xxx

THE VARIED WORK of artist Elizabeth Baskerville McNaughton will be on exhibit this month at the Town House on Lincoln and Eighth in Carmel. On display are oils, watercolors, etchings, pastels and unusual examples of sumi.

A painter since childhood, Mrs. McNaughton's curiosity about art has led her to experiment with many mediums. She is currently working with gold paper and gold spray on masonite, creating Japanese folding screens.

She studied at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts in Philadelphia, at the Chouinart Art School in Los Angeles and later with several Japanese masters in Japan.

xxx

MRS. LILLIAN DICKSON, a missionary who has established numerous children's homes, training programs for nurses and teachers and hospitals and churches in Asia, will be the guest of the Carmel Valley Community Chapel Guild next Wednesday.

The Guild's meeting will start at 12:15 p.m. in the fellowship hall of the Chapel on Village Drive and Paso Hondo Road. Tea will be served following Mrs. Dickson's talk to provide time for individuals to meet her personally.

Both men and women are invited to attend the meeting.

xxx

RESERVATIONS should be made in advance for the Oct. 13th meeting of The Ad Club, which will be held at the Shutters Restaurant in Monterey. Persons wishing to attend should contact Rosalind Heath at 373-2444.

Speaker will be Fairfax Cone of Foote, Cone & Belding, a prominent advertising specialist whose book, "With All Its Faults," gives a candid account of his forty years in the advertising world.

Joyce Jenkins exhibit at Village Gallery...

'Art is beauty and doing beautiful things'

By PAT GRIFFITH

To me, art is beauty and doing beautiful things. I want to get a good feeling when I look at a painting, so to me something isn't worth putting down if it's not pretty."

This deceptively simple statement on art is actually a philosophy of life for artist Joyce Jenkins, who speaks and acts with the good-natured self-assurance of one who looks at life and finds it good.

Her one-woman show, which opened Sunday at the bright and inviting Village Gallery on Delfino Place, is a vibrant testimony to the beauty that abounds all around us, if we but have the eyes to see.

Those who are looking for deep social commentary or strident op-art symbolism will have to find it elsewhere, for Mrs. Jenkins shuns arty intellectual games and hidden messages. Flowers bursting from a vase, waves crashing against the shore, a fantasy castle rising on a misty hilltop...these and many other varied subjects make up a total collection that is positive, forthright and definitely "beautiful."

Mrs. Jenkins moved to the Valley last January, after several years of living in the Monterey Peninsula Country Club area. She immediately converted the garage of her home on Paso Hondo into a studio "that keeps being worked on, like the Taj Mahal!"

She paints in the evenings and on Tuesdays, the one day she isn't working at the Langford Gallery on San Carlos in Carmel.

She paints in spurts. "For awhile I'll do nothing but seascapes, and then I can't stand them anymore and will do landscapes or a still life."

At the present she is studying abstract painting "in the hopes it will give me some new visions. You can make an abstract out of anything."

INSPIRATION

Inspiration comes from many and sometimes unexpected sources. She is enchanted by antique prints, especially those by Doré.

"Working from black and white stimulates the imagination," she explains, "and you get to figure out the lighting for yourself. The print is just a suggested theme."

A friend recently gave her six copies of Harper's magazine dated before 1900, a treasure filled with old engravings that stimulate her active imagination and inspire new paintings.

As someone who started painting at the age of four, she has come "a long way, baby" both personally and professionally since her years of study at the Houston Art Museum, Baylor University, the Art Center School in Los Angeles and the University of Houston.

During the 1940's she worked for Disney Studios, an experience she credits with teaching her to draw with fluid, controlled strokes. Later she designed scenery and backdrops for traveling stage shows. She still enjoys doing some free-lance fashion drawings, which she finds "a marvelous discipline. It helps you to paint more freely."

Since arriving on the Peninsula, she has found herself artistically. She is not interested in art competitions and freely admits that she agreed to this month's show which comes on the heels of one in Yuba City, with some misgivings because of the work and pressure involved.

MANY NEW PAINTINGS

About one fourth of the paintings in this show are new, completed recently just for this exhibit. The others represent her work over a period of the past four years.

"I like to paint for myself, what seems right to me. I don't try to paint to try to please a certain type of person."

She thinks that parents who have artistic children should "leave them alone. Appreciate what they do, whether it's good or bad. It's still them, what they feel."

Art classes for children are all right, she believes, but only if they are "free" and allow for full self-expression.

"I'm extremely permissive when it comes to other people," she laughs. "I don't think there should be restrictions on creative people."

One thing she finds hopeful for the future is the way more and more young couples are investing in art as a very necessary part of their lives. She said one young couple came into the Langford Gallery a couple of weeks ago and told her "we don't know what we're going to eat next week, but we're going to have some art to look at."

Although contemporary art is not her style, she has full appreciation for this avenue of self-expression.

"These artists are expressing themselves and we have to be open-minded," she says.

"But for me, philosophically speaking, I like to stay in the middle of the road, awful though that may sound. It allows you to go either way. It allows you to be sympathetic to both sides, and sometimes both sides need it."

UNDER THE OAKS & AMONG THE CACTI

By Mildred Hattan

"A SLOW BOAT TO CHINA"...the title of a popular song several years ago sounded very appealing to a Valley family who found their departure for Singapore...HECTIC! Mary Kaye and Dick King with three small sons, Chris, Andy and Math, received the exciting news that they had been assigned to the Singapore branch of Litton with which Dick has been associated at Fort Ord. A flurry of excited activity followed with the necessary storage of furnishings, leasing of their house and packing for overseas. At the peak of confusion, Dick was flown to Philadelphia to conduct a crash training program for Army personnel who will be working on the West Coast project in which he has been involved. This left Mary Kaye to cope with all of the "animal-vegetable-mineral" arrangements and the goodbyes to a community filled wity so many of their friends. There were numerous small dinner parties, a champagne punch farewell party, and a reception at the Community Center especially for the families of the young people of the many organizations to which the Kings belonged.

The punch party given by Susie and Vic Harber at their home on Lilac Lane (with the male half of the honored guests missing) had red, Mary Kaye's favorite color, for a theme. Aiding Susie were Mmes. Allard, Clark, Colvin and Bresk. The buffet table was centered with an arrangement of red and pink carnations and a large farewell card was signed by the guests who included Marilyn and Ed Colvin, Freida and Frank Bresk, Valerie and Chris Spaulding, Jeanette and Lloyd Swanson, Barbara and David Allard, Jeanelle and Roy Kaminski, Marcia and George Lockwood, Gerry and Chick Clark, Meladee and Paul Tocchet, Joyce and Dan Mayers, Dee Dee and Ollie White, Kay and Steve Thigpen, Joanene and Bud Platter, Barbara and Mel Blevins, Eloise and Joe Sturgill, Lyde and Lee Mink, and Audrey and Andy Wolf.

Flags and a ship's ring reading "S.S. KING" decorated the door of the Community Center. Guests entered to find the center festooned with oriental lanterns and a huge tree of cherry blossoms. Planned by Mrs. Lloyd Swanson, who was assisted by Mrs. Vic Harber, Mrs. Ed Colvin, Mrs. Kay Draper and Mrs. Mildred Hattan, guests were representative of the many community activities which have benefitted from the King family efforts.

The King home on Miramonte has been leased to Helen and Tom Moore who with their children Katie, Tomm and Sean have just returned from an interesting tour with the Peace Corps in Africa. The children have attended French schools for three years and speak fluently the language of the diplomats. The Moores lived for a month at the Valley Lodge until their household goods arrived. Tom is associated with the District Attorney's office in Salinas.

CARMEL VALLEY'S OWN "YEOMAN-ETTE," Donna Hamilton, (by her own admission there are only TWO in captivity) has recently returned from the luxury liner Mariposa's last cruise of the season to Alaska. The cruise was blessed with "summer-cotton-weather" and passengers were able to see and marvel at the beauty of the inland passages in soft Alaskan twilight. Glacier Bay was the farthest point visited on the 15-day tour which left from a San Francisco pier, sailed south to Los Angeles, and included stops at Vancouver, Victoria Island, Juneau, Skagway and Sitka. Donna, who was supposedly on a five-month leave from her Pacific runs, was called on the northern trip to fill an emergency and thoroughly enjoyed the arctic contrast with usual tropical assignment. She has leased her Valley home to the MacDowell family of Fresno and will be returning soon on the S.S. Monterey to the Honolulu and South Pacific route with a possible trip to the Mediterranean.

Her daughter, Dottie and a Carmel friend, Sandy Sullivan, left recently for classes at the University of Hawaii and have found an apartment to share in the Maikai district of Honolulu. Time spent in her home on the Mainland is looked forward to as eagerly as anyone not fortunate enough to have Donna's fascinating job plan their annual vacations. Her Valley home is always filled with family and friends, among those who most recently signed her guest register were Rev. Dr. Edwin Falteisek, (who had just instructed a guest course in theology in Beverly Hills at Merrymont) and Rev. Dr. Edward Kelley (both gentlemen are from the University of St. Louis); her nephew and family, Mr. and Mrs. John Charles McClurg and sons David and Nick, from Kansas City, Mo.; her nephew and his wife Mr and Mrs. Robert McClurg of San Francisco; her niece, Edith McClurg, who just received her master's degree from Syracuse University in radio and television and was returning from her valley visit to take over the radio station at the University of Missouri in Kansas City; Patrick Green of Honolulu; Mrs. Thomas Reide of San Francisco; and Miss Dorothy Bissing (the SECOND yeoman-ette in captivity!) who makes her home in Mill Valley.

MARY KAYE KING holding young son Math is surrounded by a few of the guests who dropped by the Kings farewell reception at the Community Center. Dick had been called out of town but messages of appreciation were left in the guest book for their volunteered hours with Indian Guides, Girl Scout Cadettes, Brownie Scouts, Vacation Bible School, and the Senior High Youth Group. THE KIWANIS OF CARMEL VALLEY had an opportunity to hear an up-to-date report on the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center from its president, Gordon Harlander, who appeared as guest speaker at the Tuesday luncheon held at Rippling River Resort. The budget, programs for community youths, and the beautification project were just a few of the plans and problems of the board touched on by Harlander.

Representatives of the Valley club joined those from clubs of the division at the Rancho Canada Golf Club installation dinner for Lt. Gov. Lynn Davis last Saturday night. Valleyites included Mr. and Mrs. Charles Strathmeyer, Dr. and Mrs. Dean Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Fly, Capt. (ret.) and Mrs. George Clifford and Dr. Keith Howell.

FORMER LOWER CIRCLE RESIDENTS, Joyce and Bill Nelson and their small fry, Jerry, David and Michael, visited recently enroute from a vacation in Washington to San Diego where Bill is stationed with the Navy. They were guests during their Valley stay at the Rancho Del Monte Resort and visited with many old friends.

COUSINS, ARNOLD AND ROY WALKER drove down from Alameda last week to visit Shane Hattan, who with both legs in casts from injuries sustained in a fall September 1 at Big Basin is vying for the title of Wheel Chair Jockey of the Year with his buddy Larry Cummings. Larry, in a body cast from a mini bike accident has been released from the hospital and is recuperating at home.

A PANETTA ROAD RESIDENT, Mrs. Grant (Julie) Risdon, has taught the children of Chualar for several years. So dedicated is she to her young charges that her interest in the children continues after the dismissal bell signals classes are ended for the day..or even summer vacation. So infectious is her enthusiasm for her work with the youngsters of Chualar that she has been able to persuade the involvement of numerous adults. For example, when, via Julie, a former Rancho Road resident, Mrs. Robert Schwarz, now of Del Mesa, learned that many of the children had never received a personal letter, she took time to write each child in Julie's class. On a summer beach trip went Mrs. Dale Wilson and Alan Stoltzfus who shared the thrill of children who had never before seen the ocean.

A day at the Monterey County Fair was made possible when Annette Nahikoa volunteered to accompany Julie and her class. And still another first, a boat trip, was made possible through the willing assistance of Lili Gardner, Davin Risdon, and Catalina Jimenez. Valley artist, Dick Crispo learned of the talents of Lupe Mancillas, a student at Chualar Elementary, and has been giving him special lessons and had his young student spend several weekends with him at his Valley home.

Julie would very much like to have a large assortment of children's books which her pupils may read and enjoy once their daily assignments are completed. The school's library is small and she has learned that few of the children have any books in their homes. Anyone having outgrown fairy stories, records, games and puzzles may drop them by the Village Library where Librarian Betty Shields has graciously agreed to accept items which would be so welcome. Won't you take a few moments to check through your bookshelves and toy chests? Julie's children in Chualar would be so grateful.

THE CARMEL VALLEY LIONS CLUB are once again the CHAMPION DONKEY BASEBALL TEAM of the sun-drenched-smoke-filled Upper Carmel Valley following Saturday's event at the Carmel Valley Little League Field. It was necessary for the Valley team to add Bill Hoecker, Duggie Tarratino and John Hicks in order to defeat the Mission 200 Lions Club of Carmel. It was the first time that the Carmel Club has competed and they learned to master their mounts so quickly that they returned home with the Jackass Derby trophy.

Winners of the Donkey Derby, a special event for the youngsters who had helped to sell tickets, were Dennis Tavares, first, Blaine Black, second, and Judy Wright, third.

THE REV. REX LINDQUIST will speak at a 6 p.m. film showing at Oct. 11 at the First Baptist Church of Carmel at Schulte and Carmel Valley Road. The title will be "Finding Gold in Alaska." He will also speak at the morning service.

He and Mrs. Lindquist have been with the pastoral ministry for 32 years in Omaha, Denver and Anchorage and are the new owners of a bible store in Salinas.

The public is invited to attend.

FOOTBALL ACTION in Carmel Valley. Tularcitos youngsters go all-out in their flag football games, with a new season now underway. Photo by George T.C. Smith

MORE OAKS & CACTI

Football season had its official kickoff Saturday in Carmel Valley with eight teams competing on the Tularcitos Field. Coach Herb Reuter is in charge of the weekly games which are a coordinated program of the Tularcitos School and the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center. Scores of teams made up of second, third, fourth and fifth grade boys were:

Rams 13	Raiders 0
Jets 6	Grass Hogs 0
Snoopy Specials 18	Road Runners 0
Titans 24	Goliaths 12

In a post-game interview, Coach Reuter had high praise for the first game performances of the teams and for the following individuals signalled out in a game by game review.

"In the Ram-Raider scramble, Jeff Mink exploded off tackle for a 35-yard gain, the first grand play by the Rams. Ten plays later, Mink intercepted Tony Scardina's bomb on the 3-yard line and went all the way for the Rams second tally.

"Until the last two minutes of play the game between the Jets and Grass Hogs was scoreless due to the unrelenting defense of Robert Aponte and Rogan Hattan of the Grass Hogs and Stevel Ramel and Charles Harlander of the Jets. With less than two minutes remaining, the Jets' David Fogelmanis scored on a pass from Steve Ramel.

"Jody Moore after a 30-yard run scored the opening marker for the Snoopy Specials. After half time, Jay Jones grabbed the second half kickoff and ran all the way for the Snoopys' second tally.

"David Fogelmanis and Brian Hanel of the Titans combined to score a pair of tallies a piece to offset the scoring thrust of Kevin Washington and Josh Davidson of the Golliaths."

"An old oak leaf cluster" to Reuter, Luther Washington, Gordon Harlander, Frank Bresk and Dick Gayman (fathers who served as officials for the first games) and to the record number of parents who turned out to support the fledgling ball players. The games are each Saturday a.m. from 9-11. An invitation is extended to residents of all ages to view this well-organized fall recreation program for boys of elementary school age.

ART CLASS

Mrs. Jon Englund announces that the after school Arts and Crafts program instigated last year at Tularcitos will begin again this year on October 6 for students who are enrolled in grades 1-3. The class meets each Tuesday from 3:30 to 4:30 in Bob Skiles' Art Room. The youngsters will again as last year be offered a diversified program in creativity.

CVCYC TRIP TO MARINE WORLD

The bus trip to Marine World sponsored by the CV Community Center has been scheduled for October 24. A ticket table will be set up at the Tularcitos Football field on Pilot Road on October 10 between 10 and 11 a.m. where parents may make their paid reservations. Tickets are $2.00 per child and $3.00 for adults (children under 8 must be accompanied by an adult.) You may packa picnic lunch or plan to eat at the concessions there. Residents are urged to make this an outing for the entire family.

CVCYC ANNUAL FUND DRIVE

"Pardon the heat!" So says Carmel Valley Community Youth Center fund drive chairman, Mrs. Dale Buche who has extended the annual fund drive as a courtesy to her workers who were finding door to door collections difficult during our current heat wave. To date the drive has fallen short of last year's $3600.00. A breakdown of the $1707.75 received so far shows $1,252.75 collected by neighborhood canvassing; $200.00 donated by Valley business) and $255.00 received by mail (this includes the return of envelopes left by workers when a resident is not home and donations by interested persons alerted via publicity.)

The hopes of achieving a good recreation program this fall and maintaining the Community Youth Center lies in the money yet to be received. A note of thanks from Mrs. Buche states, "I would like to publicly thank each of the volunteers. It is deeply appreciated that each person has generously taken from their busy schedules, time to help out with the drive that could resultedly give our children and families a fun year. Thanks to Mrs. Dick Radowicz, Dr. Al Holine, Mrs. John Conklin, Mrs. Sal Verde, Mrs. Jim Ijams, Mrs. Ray Lindsay, Mrs. Lee Murphy, Mrs. Tom Verga, Mrs. Luther Washington, Mrs. John Fogelmanis, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Harlander, Mrs. Jon Englund, Mrs. Don Sweiss, Sherrie Sweiss, Mrs. Mel Blevins, Mrs. Russell Smelser, Mrs. Herb Reuter, Mrs. Dave Allard, Mrs. Chris Spaulding, Mrs. Dick Hanson, Mrs. Darrell Jewett, Mrs. Paul Tocchet, Mrs. Ray Wolfe, Mrs. Richard Lee, Mr. and Mrs. Vic Harber, Mrs. Robert Oross, Mrs. Harvey Deal, Dr. and Mrs. Jack Taylor, Mrs. Roger Sherman, Mr. Bob Hebert, Mrs. Richard Hindman, Mrs. Carl Deitman, Mrs. Charles Clark, Mrs. James Stewart, Mrs. Zane Speiser, Mrs. George Lockwood, Mrs. William Broderick, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Lyon, Mrs. Lee Mink, Mrs. Rex Pryor, and Mrs. Susan Stewart.

When the volunteer comes to your door, PLEASE give generously!"

FORMAL ORGANIZING MEETING

Thursday, 4:00 to 6:00 p.m. a YWCA tea and meeting will be held at the Estrada Adobe on Tyler Street, Monterey.

You are urged to attend and bring a guest for the social tea and our first official meeting. The speakers will be Mrs. Chester Root, Vice President and Western Region Chairman, National Board of the YWCA of the U.S.A, and Miss Hattie Droll, Western Region Field Consultant, National Board, YWCA, San Francisco, California.

At the meeting, the list of Board members will be presented, and your selection of five members for the Nominating Committee.

Members of the board from Carmel Valley include Eloise Ewing, a resident of the Carmel Valley Manor. She has had professional experience with YMCA in diverse communities and on regional staff of the National Board. She was also associated with the Women's Bureau, U.S. Department of Labor. Mrs. Julian F. Rowe, also a Valley resident, is one of the first promoters of the Monterey Peninsula YWCA. She brings a wealth of professional experience: Camp Fire Grils, U.S.O., YWCA, Red Cross, and the church.

'Monterey Jade' - the famous hallmark of Marzi's Potte

RUDI MARZI is the genial genius behind the Monterey Pottery shop in Carmel Valley Village. A San Franciscan by birth and upbringing, he studied pottery in Hawaii before moving to Carmel Valley with his equally artistic wife, Nancy, in 1960.

ARTISTIC DESIGNS like these have won Rudi Marzi a high reputation as a potter. He has had several offers to promote and market his work on a national, or even international, scale, but he resists them all by asking a question: "How's YOUR health? Are YOU happy?" And to the inevitable shrug or stammered response, he replies "I feel great."

BY PAT GRIFFITH

Just as chefs have their "secret" sauces, artistic potters pride themselves on developing formulas for unusual glazes that no one else can duplicate.

On the Monterey Peninsula, the shimmering blue-greens of "Monterey Jade" are the exclusive hallmark of Rudi Marzi's Monterey Pottery shop in Carmel Valley Village.

The swirling colors, which somehow suggest bright sun glinting on the ocean, were developed many years ago by Eleanor Wellborn, who operated a Monterey Pottery shop in Seaside.

Rudi and Nancy Marzi arrived here in 1960,took over the name and the magic formula, and embarked on a success story that just won't stop.

"Of course it wasn't really supposed to work out this way," Marzi said last week with an infectious grin. "When we started out in a small shop in the Village, our idea was that Nancy was going to run the shop and I was going to be building most of the time.

"You know, we'd just sort of play with the pottery, and sell our playthings ... I really thought that the appeal of this glaze would ease off pretty quickly."

What happened in practice was that business never slowed down enough for Rudi to get out of the shop, and pretty soon he found himself hiring other people to keep up with the orders for Monterey Jade.

They outgrew their original location in the Village Center and moved into their new studio-showroom five and a half years ago.

"Now we really need to move again," Marzi sighed, "but I'm not sure I really want to. If I expand from here, it will have to be at least five or six times as big. Then I'll have to start competing with imports from Japan, and I'll have to get prices way down and mass produce and employ salesmen and ... ahhhhh." His arms shot out and he shook his head in dismay at the prospect.

He didn't say it just then, but obviously what he would miss most is the easy camaraderie so immediately apparent to anyone who visits the shop. People are busy, to be sure -- stacks of plates and bowls, rows of plump birds and coffee mugs await their turn to be glazed and fired. For every piece that is completed, two more break from molds to take their place.

LOTS OF CONVERSATION

But while hands fly from task to task, the air is filled with conversation, rich, varied, whimsical or deeply philosophical. Ideas and questions flit back and forth with graceful ease, and the person who comes in to buy a candlestick may find himself detained for an hour to discuss something as broad as contemporary society or as specific as how to make buttermilk.

The latter question, incidentally, resulted in a raging argument a few weeks ago, when who should wander into the shop but a graduate student from Davis who had majored in dairy sciences.

"It was really uncanny," Marzi said. "What would the odds be against someone like that coming in just when we were talking about buttermilk? Fantastic, really. Things like that are always happening around here."

While Monterey Jade is what keeps the shop in business, Marzi takes equal pleasure from his "side interests" -- bronze casting, sculpture, making jewelry. A graduate of the California College of Arts and Crafts in Oakland, where he studied "everything but pottery", he is now enrolled in a sculpture class in Carmel and a metal class conducted by the Carmel Adult School.

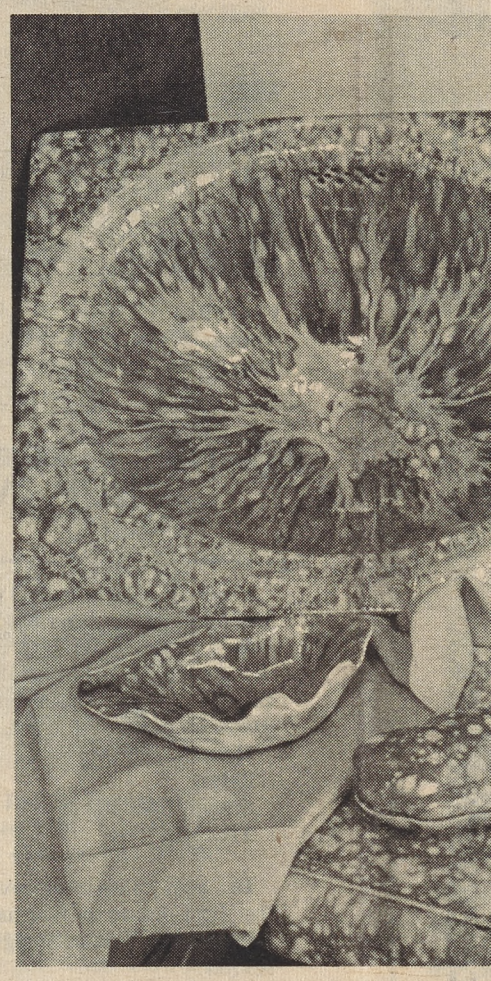

"This is for my own recreation. It's how I relax," he laughed. "After working here all day, I can't go home and face making more pottery in my studio there. Sometimes, maybe, when I'm in the mood. But usually I've had enough."

Home has a special added attraction these days, a baby daughter named Robin "who's a Leo, like my other children, Lori and Duane."

Marzi looked around his cool showroom, with its large fountain splashing playfully against one wall.

"You know, I like it here," he mused. "So let someone else get the ulcers trying to get bigger and bigger, earning more and more money. This is a good place. I'm happy."

You know he means it.

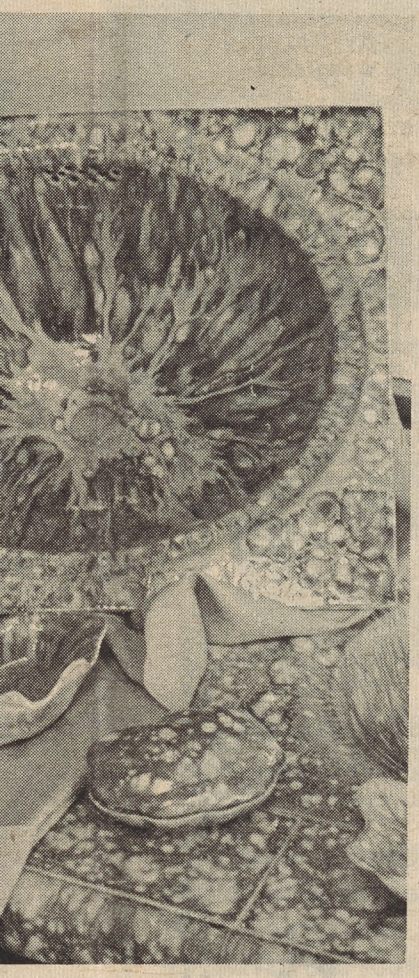

MONTEREY JADE is the special name f blue-green pottery that comes from Marzi Village. It is a big seller in several shops in also sold as far away as Phoenix, Ariz, du tourist season.

NATIONAL DOG WEEK

The very fact that one week of the year has been named to commemorate dogs gives a clue to how intimately they are tied to human affairs in this country. The theme of National Dog Week is "Deserve to be Your Dog's Best Friend."

Each year the canine population in the United States grows and more and more families obtain dogs for a variety of reasons. Concurrent with the population explosion in dogs comes a rising "canine crime rate"—misdeeds blamed on dogs that are really the fault of their human owners.

In Chicago and New York steps are being taken that curtail and possibly seek to eliminate the activities of dogs. Chicago recently passed a law that bans dogs, on or off leash, from all city parks. Non-dog-owning New Yorkers are growing increasingly vocal in their attacks on dogs fouling sidewalks and park areas alike. Apartment house leases frequently prohibit not only dogs but cats and even birds.

In rural and semi-rural areas, dogs roaming loose often form packs and menace people and livestock as well as constitute serious traffic and pedestrian hazards on our roads.

Monthly, even daily, the problems increase as more dogs are born, more are purchased or adopted, and more "surplus" animals are put to sleep by pounds and humane societies that are deluged with unwanted pets.

Why is this happening and what does it forebode for our dogs?

It is happening as a direct result of dog owners' neglect and lack of education about the responsibilities of dog ownership. And it forebodes, unless we stem the tide and correct the abuses, outright banishment of all dogs from our cities and more stringent control in less urbanized areas.

People buy dogs for a number of reasons. Usually, because most people like dogs, they obtain one as a family pet. Unfortunately, in recent years, more and more city-dwellers have purchased large dogs—German Shepherds, Doberman Pinschers, Great Danes—solely as "watchdogs" and crime deterrents without fully realizing what owning such dogs entails.

The average person obtaining his first dog knows as little about its needs—its proper care and training—as he does about an elephant's. If he lived with a dog when he was a child, he may remember his mother scraping off the dinner plates to feed Fido. At best, most novice dog owners think opening a can of dog food constitutes good nutrition.

They have never heard of inoculations to protect dogs from canine diseases—unless rabies vaccination is a law in their city. And perhaps the greatest of canine abuses, they know absolutely nothing about the responsibility of training their new dog to make him a decent, law-abiding canine citizen. Nor do they know—or care to know—about canine birth control to prevent surplus puppies. People still labor under the misconception that "it's good for a dog to have puppies."

The people who perpetrate the abuses rarely suffer the consequences. The dogs do; and so do the conscientious dog owners whose dogs are truly members of the family, whose dogs are loved and cared for and trained and controlled. It is the dog owner who never lets his dog run loose, whoe pet has been trained not to bark when left alone, who sees to it that his dog never messes in the wrong place, who will truly feel the loss when the law clamps down on all dogs. It is the serious dog breeder, whose love and hobby is producing fine-quality dogs who will be hurt most when laws are passed that force all females to be spayed.

Through the ages, dogs have earned their place beside man. Man, by not deserving his dog's company, is now threatening to sever that centuries-old relationship.

So many problems could be solved so simply!

Suppose, for example, that every animal shelter, public and private, not only required that all female dogs be spayed as a condition of adoption, but also required that every new owner and his dog attend a series of lecture-classes on dog care and training. Certainly, when you adopt a dog you are given a handful of pamphlets. But do you read them? Can the new dog owner understand them? Wouldn't a series of classes, conducted by a humane officer, a veterinarian (donating his time) and an obedience trainer be more practical?

Suppose, again, that every city and every county maintaining an animal shelter held inoculation and spaying clinics where dogs could be brought not only for a rabies shot but for distemper-hepatitis-leptospirosis "shots" and where females could be spayed (again by veterinarians donating their services) at a nominal cost. Spay fees have skyrocketed. Is it reasonable for the man who adopts a medium-sized female dog from an animal shelter to have to pay $45 to have her spayed? Such clinics are held in some cities and their services have never been abused. The veterinarians have not lost clients—they have rendered a service to dogs and their owners who simply couldn't have afforded those services in the first place.

And couldn't the purebred dog people—the dog clubs, the serious hobbyists—make certain that everyone buying a purebred puppy be thoroughly educated in its care? Couldn't they hold classes,too—classes open to everyone owning a dog of their breed, not just to club members—on feeding, grooming, training, on turning all those adorable puppies into well-mannered adult dogs who are a delight to behold and to own?

It is still not too late to take steps that will guarantee the basic right of "man's best friend" to be where he belongs and where he wants to be—at his master's side, repaying every kindness with faithfulness and love.

VISION CARE

BY DR. R.E. MARLIN
(consulting optometrist)

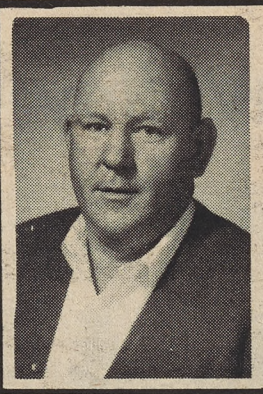

It's often asked, "What is the difference between an Optometrist, Ophthalmologist and Optician?"

This is best answered by quoting from the U.S. Government Dept. of Labor's 1970-71 Occupational Outlook Handbook, Bulletin 1650-10.

Optometrists help people improve and protect their vision. They examine eyes, make tests to determine defects in vision, and, when needed, prescribe eyeglasses, contact lenses, corrective eye exercises, or other treatment that does not require drugs or surgery. Most optometrists supply the eyeglasses prescribed, and sometimes do minor repair work such as straightening eyeglass frames. Some optometrists specialize in work such as treating visual problems of children, fitting partially sighted persons with microscopic and telescopic lenses, or other high-magnification aids; and analyzing lighting conditions that effect the efficiency of workers. A few are engaged in teaching, research, or a combination of the two.

Ophthalmologists are physicians who specialize in eye diseases and injuries, perform eye surgery, and prescribe drugs or other treatment, as well as lenses.

Dispensing Opticians fit and adjust eyeglasses according to prescriptions written by ophthalmologists or optometrists; they do not examine eyes or prescribe treatment.

There came to him one day a young man who said: "Oh, Wise One, I give much and receive little. What may I do to be better rewarded for my efforts?" Replied Kaasham "Young Friend, anything made or sold at the public market place has no value unless it has that priceless ingredient which can neither be bought nor sold -- The Integrity of those who make and he who sells it. That is the Priceless Ingredient."

65 youngsters join Carmelo 4-H Club

BY BRETT GAYMAN, 10

This is National 4-H Week, and Carmelo Club would like to introduce the people of Carmel Valley to the many fine things we do.

This year we have 65 boys and girls from the ages of 9 to 19 in our club. Usually people think of 4-H as having to do with farms and animals, but we do many other things. One group studies the ways we use electricity, another is learning to repair motors for small machines, another is learning the easy ways to sew, and some raise lambs and calves for the annual Fair. Our meetings are run by the boys and girls. They must learn to organize others and guide them or report on their projects to the newspapers.

It is a proud thing to be a 4-H member, especially when you wear the white uniforms and meet lots of people and tell them all about the good times we have, and the useful things we learn. Someday we would like to learn all of the things that there are to learn about the farm, and the best way to keep machines, and make good things from the things we grow ourselves. Next year come to the Monterey County Fair, and see for yourself what we can do.

Our leaders this year are:

Mrs. John Darch -- Food Preservation, Mr. John Darch -- Poultry; Dr. Keith Howell -- Veterinary Science; Mr. William Ingram -- Boy's Beginning 4-H Community Leader.

Mrs. George Kabot -- Cooking; Mr. Robert Kvenild -- Beekeeping; Mrs. Fran Libby -- Wildlife; Mrs. Deryck Nuckton -- Horse.

Mr. Herb Reuter -- Rabbits; Mr. Lloyd Swanson -- Electricity; Mrs. Bob Wilson -- Livestock, Community Leader; Mr. Bob Wilson -- Livestock.

Mrs. James Stewart -- Vegetable garden, Cooking; Mrs. Gerald Cook -- Clothing; Dan Wilson -- Small Engines.

A PROUD PRIZE-WINNER at the recent Monterey County Fair was Carmelo 4-H club member Bill Wilson with his well developed hampshire hog.

BOB WOOD REPORTS. . .

A REGULAR COLUMN BY BOB WOOD,
ASSEMBLYMAN - 34TH DISTRICT

A funny incident happened this last week and I thought you might like to share it with us. It seems the Lt. Governor asked that the 200 oldest people in California be given recognition and three of these were found to live in Monterey County.

One of these three, Mrs. Susan Ramsey Cornman, a resident of the Skyline Resthome in Monterey, is 104 years old and still sharp as a tack. I presented this certificate of recognition to her in company with a free-lance photographer we hired for the occasion.

The photograther is known by many of you in Carmel Valley. He is the well-known and well-liked George "Smitty" Smith of Carmel Valley and a photographer for the Outlook. Smitty is probably in his late fifties. He does however, have a beard and the beard is predominately white.

After the 104 year old Mrs. Cornman had her picture taken she turned to Mr. Smith and asked if he was one of the other two in Monterey County over 100 years old. (Everyone roared with laughter.) I am sure she meant no malice in her question but was completely serious. This might be a lesson to those of you who might be considering growing a beard and not knowing for sure just what color the beard might turn out to be.

Enuf for now ...

'Super Beetle' offers many extra goodies

Volkswagen's "bug," long the world's most popular economy car, comes in two versions for 1971: the Beetle and the Super Beetle.

While the Beetle features added power, a flow-through ventilation system and a number of other improvements for 1971, the new three-inch-longer Super Beetle reportedly incorporates more engineering changes than any VW since the first "bugs" came to America 21 years ago.

Both 1971 Beetles have a new 60-horsepower engine, up from last year's 57-h.p. powerplant, which gives them a top and cruising speed of 81 miles per hour.

Engine modifications, a new carburetor and an evaporative control fuel system keep both Beetle powerplants within the allowable emission levels in the company's continued campaign against smog.

While both the Beetle and Super Beetle share in a number of improvements for 1971—including the flow-through ventilation system, added theft protection and an aluminum oil cooler—the Super Beetle has many more all to itself.

They include stronger bumpers on the 161.8-inch-long car which measures 3.2 inches longer than the Beetle. The new bumpers are equipped with rubber inserts, especially useful in parking lot scrapes.

Among additional features in the Super Beetle are:

—A larger front trunk with more than nine cubic feet of luggage space, nearly twice as much as before.

—A relocated and slightly larger gasoline tank with an 11-gallon capacity.

—A front track of 54.3 inches—2.7 inches wider than the Beetle—and a tighter turning circle of 31.5 feet.

—A fresh-air blower to keep air moving through the passenger compartment during those slow-moving traffic jams on rainy days.

—Larger front brakes.

—Easier steering.

Special convenience and comfort features found on the Super Beetle include a carpeted floor, a pocket on the passenger door, an electrically-operated rear window demister.

Carmel author Charles Mohler will be at the Thunderbird Book Shop to autograph his newly published novel, "The Hill", on Sunday, Oct. 11 from 12 noon until 2 p.m. Set as it is in Carmel, this is a gripping story about the conflicting forces at work during the construction of the interchange on Highway 1, on the northerly side of Carmel Hill.

It is Mohler's story of the violent record of the changes which take place in Carmel, but also it is a universal, compassionate novel of people who use force to settle conflicting social values. Published by Prentice-Hall, "The Hill" is 'must' reading for everyone on the Monterey Peninsula, especially. THE THUNDERBIRD SHOP is located 3.5 miles from Carmel on W. Carmel Valley Rd. (adjacent to Quail Lodge). Open everyday. Phone 624-1803.

Fire Ban Is Lifted

Fire Chief Chip Collins said yesterday that the total ban on all burning in Carmel Valley has been lifted for the time being. This means that incinerators may be used between 7 a.m. and noon, and that outdoor barbecues and fireplaces may also be used. Collins recommended that homeowners put a ¼ inch screen over the top of their chimneys to keep hot ashes from blowing out and starting a fire.

The Carmel Valley Fire Department responded to three small fires last week, all of which were quickly extinguished.

Last Wednesday a grass fire burned one fourth of an acre on the fire road at the top of Robles del Rio at 5:40 p.m. before it was put out. On Thursday, the department answered a mutual aid call at 11:34 p.m. for a fire in a station wagon at the top of Laureles Grade. The car was owned by Roger Gammons Jr. of Cachagua.

On Sunday afternoon the department put out a small grass and rubbish fire burining along Carmel Valley Road near Rippling River Resort. The blaze is under investigation.

FIRST AID CALLS

The Red Cross ambulance operated by the Carmel Valley Fire Department answered three emergency calls last week.

On Wednesday, Sept. 30, it took Mrs. Helen Dickinson of Horizon Way to Community Hospital at 9:15 a.m.

At 6:45 p.m. that evening, it was called to West Garzas Road where Barbara Jean Olsen, 13, had been injured when she collided with a car while riding a bicycle. She was taken to Community Hospital.

On Monday, at 4:42 p.m. the ambulance reported to a local doctor's office and took Lois Fahrney of Carmel to Community Hospital as a medical emergency.

Open House at Fire Station on Saturday

This is National Fire Prevention Week, an annual observence that has never been more timely.

The Carmel Valley Volunteer Fire Department will hold open house from 1 to 4 p.m. Saturday, and Chief Chip Collins and his crew will pass out red fire helmets to all the small fry who drop in to say hello.

The Valley Fire Department will be host to the quarterly meeting of the Central Coast Counties Firemen's Association on Wednesday, Oct. 21. Firemen from Santa Cruz, San Benito and Monterey counties will gather at the new recreation building at the firehouse for a steak barbecue and a talk by Don Gasperson, chief of the Pacific Grove Fire Department.

Bill Parham and Raz Belleci are in charge of arrangements for the dinner.

A remarkable 'Virginia Woolf' launches Circle Theatre season

Incredibly fine performances by each of the four members of the cast.

This must be said first of all about the Circle Theatre's new play, "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf", which opened last weekend.

So much has already been said about this Edward Albee "adult drama", ever since it opened on Broadway 8 years ago, and later as a movie tour de force with Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor.

Its high marks for excellence as a modern day fable -- albeit it a shocking and bitter one -- present a formidable challenge to any kind of community theatre, including the excellent ones in Carmel.

Anyone who has seen it, or will see it (and every local theatre-goer should), must agree that the local Community Theatre has met it head on - and with tremendous success.

Director Michael Keller exacts superb performances from each of the performers, two of whom are experienced, two comparatively inexperienced. Each identifies completely with the individual character portrayals; so completely, that the emotional experience obviously has exhausted them; and it has much of the audience too.

Bob Lotz and Vee Mariano as George and Martha (the roles played by Burton and Taylor) invest themselves in the electrifying marital warfare (which is what the play is all about) with devestating effectiveness. Seldom has married life been so dramatized as evil. Or is it? The denouement may very well surprise you, and surely will make you ponder.

As a shabby college professor married to the daughter of the college's president, George and Martha play their "fun and games" with a young new professor and his wife, Nick and Honey, played by Rick Shoup and Wendy Grissim.

The "games" go on endlessly, building destruction on destruction, until finally the young guests are ripped apart, fiber by moral fiber. All for the sake of "games" that the aging older couple must compulsively play to rationalize their own failures, guilt and inadequacies.

Both Mr. Shoup and Miss Grissim portray their emotional crackups with almost too convincing reality. From innocent guests of George and Martha (following a late-late party), they become ensnared in the ruthless "fun and games", then trapped, and finally victimized.

The dialog is frequently crude and utterly obscene; the situations are emotional volcanoes and sexually raw. The "games" seem never to end, or have an ending. This kind of theatre is alternately revolting and compelling. It is certainly not for the shockable or the pristine. But it is provocative.

Michael Keller, as he has so often done before, puts it all together and sustains the tension and the corrosiveness that human relations can attain. And he has achieved a blending, repulsive though it may be, of the diverse and struggling characters.

Others who assisted in this remarkable performance were Gloria Wheeler, production assistant; Don Porter, Gregg Fessler and Rick Mannheim, stage managers; Ruth Fry, set decoration; Adele Bramlet, costumes; and Frohman Productions, scenery.

If this is a fair sample, the Community Theatre is off and running to a great 1970-71 theatre season. "Virginia Woolf" runs weekends through Oct. 31.

ST. BASIL'S Cathedral in Moscow, from Clay Francisco's color travel and adventure film "Russia in the 70's", first offering of the season in the Explorama series at Sunset Theater, in Carmel. It can be seen Fri. and Sat., Oct. 16 and 17.

New Explorama series opens on October 16-17

Explorama, the popular travel and adventure film series, has announced their 1970-71 programs.

"Rusia in the 70's", a new 2-hour color travel and adventure film, will be the opening program of the new series. The film will be presented for two performances at 8:15 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Oct. 16 and 17, in Carmel's Sunset Auditorium.

The film will be narrated in person by its producer Clay Francisco. Francisco recently returned from a 10,000 mile journey through the Soviet Union. His exciting new film covers the better known tourist areas of Russia and also includes footage taken in remote towns and villages being visited for the first time by a Western photographer.

Highlights include Kazakhstan, in Central Asia, near the sensitive Red China border; the legendary minarets and mosques of Samarkand; the Georgian State Dance Company performing in their capital city of Tblisi; young people shown at the Yuri Gagarin Pioneer Camp; rare views of the interiors of the Kremlin and a ceremony at Lenin's Mausoleum in Red Square; a performance of the Moscow Circus; rock and roll, Soviet style and the world famed Bolshoi Theatre. Thousands of Russian sailors are also shown celebrating Navy Day. The cities of Novgorod and Leningrad are also featured in the film.

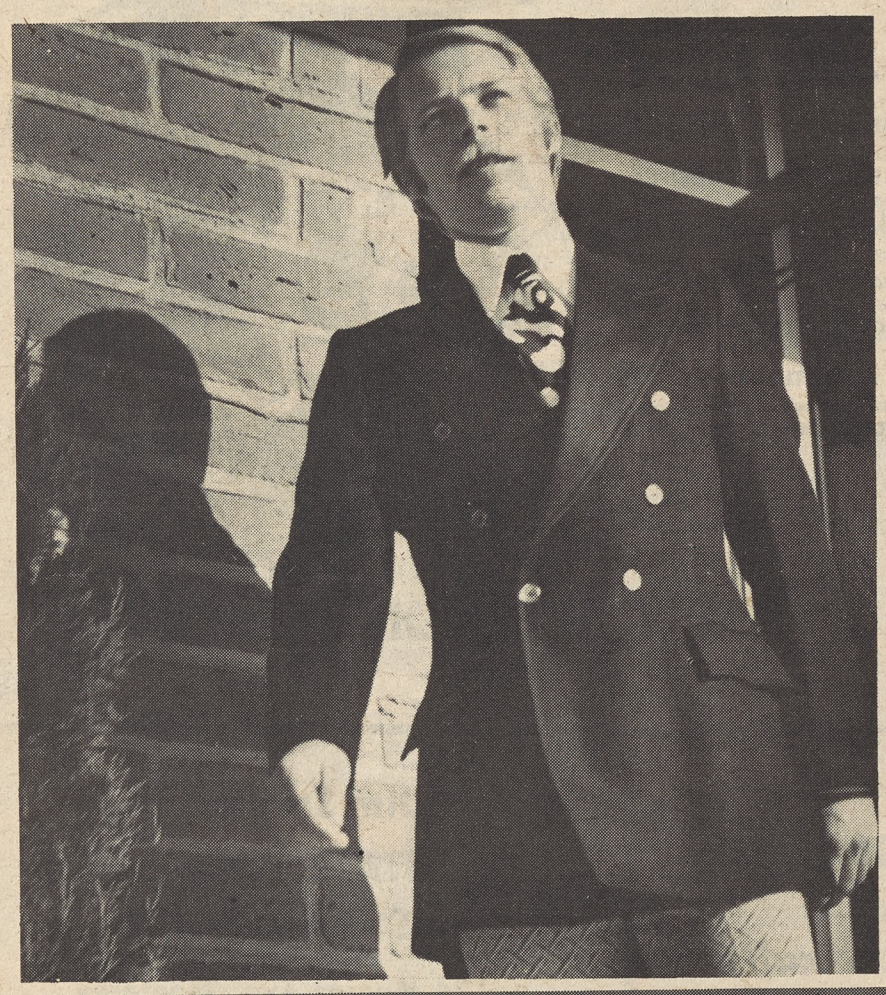

The new Explorama Series consists of eight feature length documentaries, all with in person narration and each being presented on two consecutive nights in Carmel.

Others include "A Swedish Summer", narrated by Dick Reddy; "Londontown" by Howard Pollard; "Spain" with Eric Pavel; "High Himalaya", by Russ Potter; Philip Walker will present "Japanese Summer"; Nicol Smith with narrate "A South Sea Holiday", and the series will close in May with Ken Richter's "The Australian Adventure".

Sunrise to Sunset

George Downs is the featured artist of the month whose exhibit is now on display in the lobby of the Sunset auditorium, Monday thru Sunday, with George hosting the exhibit for the next three weekends, thru Oct. 25. This is an especially fine show. Don't miss it.

Speaking of exhibits, our display case in the outer office, 8th and San Carlos, boasts its first show of unusual nature: a private collection of creatively designed, hand-printed Christmas cards. Now we are not pushing the Christmas Season, only the many ingenious ways artistic talent may be applied to your advantage. Gracing our walls this month are the colorful serigraphs of Mary Beach, a very outstanding print-maker, water-colorist and designer. We welcome you to drop in and see these fine displays.

While I am still on the subject of excellence, I must remind you to drop by The Friends of Photography to see the private collection of prints of world-renoun photographer Ansel Adams. The doors are open 1:00 to 5:00 p.m., Monday through Friday.

I am happy to announce the Barati audio-visual Lecture Series, "A Musician Looks At The Arts", came off as scheduled Sept. 29 and it proved to be a most stimulating evening. Although the expected enrollment did not materialize, we feel most fortunate the series is being held in Carmel at the Sunset Center. I feel it is one step closer to the ultimate goal of enriching the lives of this entire community in the real sense of the word that culture implies.

I enjoyed seeing the Roth's adventure, "Whisper's Pacific Voyage". Indeed, it must take courage to circumnavigate the Pacific in a very small sailing yacht.

Our first film in the "Explorama" Series begins Oct. 16, so if you do not have a season ticket, you may purchase individual tickets at the door.

We are losing two of our resident artists temporarily, at least, both British-born originally, to visits in all points East. Barbara West will join her husband in a trip to her homeland, jolly old England, and Robert Horne will be crusing and teaching art aboard ship, enroute to Africa.

We wish them a pleasant journey and hope it won't be too long until we welcome them home again.

My closing thought, "It is far better to light a candle than curse the Darkness".

Sincerely,
DOROTHY BOWMAN

THE SANTA CLARA Aquamaids, internationally famous synchronized swimming team and National AAU team champions, will perform this weekend in Carmel Valley at Rancho Del Monte Country Club when the Cypress Swim Club presents its sixth annual fundraising "Aqua-Spectacular, the Greatest Show on Water," Sat. and Sun. at 2:30 p.m. In addition the show will feature another international star, Barbara Cooney of the San Francisco Merionettes, and two of the youngest ladies active in competitive synchronized swimming today, Lisa Babb and Barbie Callaghan of the Walnut Creek Aquanuts. Tickets for the show, proceeds of which benefit the Cypress Swim Club's travel fund, may be purchased from any member of the club or at the gate. Admission is $1.50 for adults and 75c for children under 16.

LEONARD BERNSTEIN in a scene from "A Journey to Jerusalem," a record of the activities and the events leading up to the historic concert on Mount Scopus, three weeks after the Six Day War, that commemorated the reunification of Jerusalem. The color film also features violinist Isaac Stern. It will be shown at Carmel's Village Theatre Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 14 and 15.

CVPOA supports Valley ban on trailers and mobile homes

By PAT GRIFFITH

Members of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association will be urged to turn out in force to support an ordinance banning trailers and mobile homes as permanent residences in Carmel Valley when the matter comes up before the County Planning Commission a second time on Nov. 12.

The board of directors of the CVPOA agreed Thursday night that a strong campaign by residents from all sections of the Valley will be necessary to win its approval by the Planning Commission.

Last month, when the Planning Commission first considered the proposal to establish a "J" zone through a 12-mile stretch of the Valley, three vigorous opponents of the measure spoke out against it. No one was present to speak for the ordinance, because the CVPOA directors and members of the Upper and Lower Valley Advisory Committees, who had all endorsed it, assumed there would be no opposition.

The Planning Commission then delayed action until Nov. 12, which in turn prompted the County Board of Supervisors to pass an interim 90-day ordinance which prohibits the installation of trailers or mobile homes in areas zoned KGB4 without a use permit. A use permit is already required to locate a trailer in an R-1 district.

At their meeting last week, several CVPOA directors made it clear they consider the ordinance a "critical" one in determining future Valley development.

CVPOA President Ed Lee said his main objection to trailers was aesthetic—"very rarely are they aesthetically as beautiful as even a shack..." He also noted that they are also frequently used to get around taxes, since they are legally treated as vehicles as long as the wheels are not removed.

CHALLENGE

Lee was sharply challenged by a member of the audience, Paul Jones, who asked, "How can you presume to sit there and tell people what they can do with their land?"

Jones, a building contractor, said he doesn't like trailers either, but that he doesn't believe one property owner should be able to tell another what he may or may not put on his property.

If someone were to put a trailer on property near his home, Jones said, he would try to screen it out with eucalyptus trees or other plantings.

CVPOA director George Sackman countered that the "J" zone ordinance was a form of design control, similar in concept to measures such as the one prohibiting the installation of chain link fences along Carmel Valley Road.

To underscore their opposition to trailers used as homes, the directors later voted to send a letter to Zoning Administrator Robert Slimmon opposing a request by Jack Rauber for a use permit for his trailer located at the top of the Los Tulares subdivision unless it is moved to an inconspicuous location.

Rauber has declared his trailer is necessary for a tract office and to provide round-the-clock security for his equipment. He has asked to live in the trailer for a year until he builds his own home.

Commenting that Rauber had waited until after he installed the trailer to ask for a use permit, CVPOA vice president George Lockwood said he felt Rauber had taken a risk and should be asked to move it.

On other matters, the CVPOA directors:

1. Heard an informal report from Morden Buck, chairman of a county-wide committee appointed by the Board of Supervisors to draft a hillside conservation ordinance.

Buck said he thought prospects for agreement were "something a little more hopeful than the Paris peace talks" even though committee members represent diverse viewpoints.

"These are knowledgeable people in all respects," Buck declared. "I'm cautiously hopeful that something will come up that will be really worthwhile...If they can be convinced that changes that are made will not be a threat to them, they'll go along. They have a great love for this area as we do, although perhaps their love has been expressed in a different way."

Frank Bresk, appointed to the committee to repsesent the CVPOA's position, said he would be unable to attend meetings unless they were changed from afternoons to evenings. Buck said he was hopeful that the other committee members would be able to meet in the evenings, but that if not, he would consider it essential that a representative of the CVPOA be named to replace Bresk.

2. Received a copy of the second draft of a Carmel River conservation ordinance from Supervisor Willard T. Branson. Branson said the Board of Supervisors will not hear the river ordinance before Oct. 20, at the earliest.

He said he was still undecided about calling another public hearing on the ordinance. (The ordinance will be published in the Outlook before it is heard by the supervisors again.)

3. Set Thursday, Nov. 19, as the date for the next general membership meeting, starting at 8 p.m. in the multipurpose room at Tularcitos School. "The Future of the Carmel River" will be the topic for the evening, with a panel discussion led by persons involved with water supply or water conservation.

Among those who will be invited to attend the meeting are conservationist Paul Patchick, attorney Sean Flavin, Supervisor Willard Branson, Cong. Burt Talcott, Leonard Shiff from the University of California, and representatives from the Carmel Sanitary District and the California-American Water Company.

The water company has said it will announce the tentative location of a major new dam on the upper Carmel River in late October, so it is anticipated that the company's decision will be discussed by the CVPOA membership.

Bicycle route along Carmel Valley Road?

BIKES AND GRAVEL don't mix, even when the rider is as experienced as Steve Chaney, above. This is what happens when cyclists swerve to get out of the way of cars.

MOTORISTS ARE FORCED to hug the center line, at 55 miles an hour, to avoid sideswiping Connie Willert as she rides along Carmel Valley Road.

TO MARKET, TO MARKET on the only non-polluting vehicles around go Mrs. James Sanders of Berwick Drive and her daughter, Maria Theresa. Mrs. Sanders has been passing petitions in the Valley to promote a safe, paved bike route. She does almost all her grocery shopping by bicycle, but notes with wry amusement that most people seem to prefer driving one or two blocks to getting some exercise.

All-out effort to get right-of-way

BY PAT GRIFFITH

Bicycle enthusiasts on the Monterey Peninsula are trying to spin the right wheels to get a safe, paved bike route along Carmel Valley Road from Highway 1 to the Village.

Although the idea is an old one, for the first time cyclists are organizing a petition campaign to put pressure on the County Board of Supervisors and the County Road Department to provide a clearly-marked route for two-wheelers.

A loosely-knit group, calling itself the Monterey Peninsula Committee for Bicycle Safety, is urging that both shoulders of Carmel Valley Road be paved at least four feet wide and marked by signs as a bicycle right-of-way.

One petition, presented to the Board of Supervisors last week, was turned over to the County Road Department for further study. The road department will make a feasability report on the bike route and report back to the supervisors on Oct. 27.

"We hope to have petitions signed by several hundred people ready for the board at that meeting," Lewis Di Stefano, chairman of the cycling committee, said yesterday. "We also hope that adults in the community who would like to see bicycling furthered as an activity for the whole family will go to the hearing on Oct. 27 and support our efforts."

Persons interested in passing petitions for bike routes should contact Di Stefano at 624-4688.

Di Stefano, a math teacher at Carmel High School, is the faculty sponsor for the Carmel High School bike club. He peddles to class every morning from his home in Carmel, and regularly joins students and other adult cyclists for weekend bike excursions along scenic Monterey County roads.

The bike club is in its second year at the high school, where bicycling is now offered as a physical education elective.

One of the big reasons for the surging popularity of bicycles is ecological -- they don't pollute the air. New, lightweight bikes with up to 10 gears ease the strain of longer distances and hilly terrain. And doctors are in almost universal agreement with heart specialist Dr. Paul Dudley White that bicycling is one of the most beneficial forms of exercise available to modern man.

"Biking is also one of the few activities the whole family can enjoy together," Di Stefano said. "The only thing stopping many families from taking weekend trips now is the problem of safety on busy roads."

ROAD DEPARTMENT

Myron Jose, assistant road commissioner for Monterey County, noted last week that the road department has been improving shoulders on a piecemeal basis for some time.

At the present time there is a four-foot paved shoulder running along the south side of Carmel Valley Road between Laureles Grade and the Village, a route used by many children bicycling to Tularcitos School or the community pool.

Jose said the department will soon start improving a three to four foot shoulder along the north side of the road in that same stretch. The department also expects to put in eight-foot shoulders near the mid-Valley Shopping Center and by Berwick Manor.

"A lot just depends on what we can get in on our right-of-way, or how reasonable it is to get a strip of adjacent land," he explained.

Jose explained that the road department's real justification for paving shoulders is to provide for emergency parking and improved highway safety.

"We have a major obligation to the people who pay gasoline taxes, which is where our money comes from," Jose said. "And of course bicycles don't pay any gas tax.

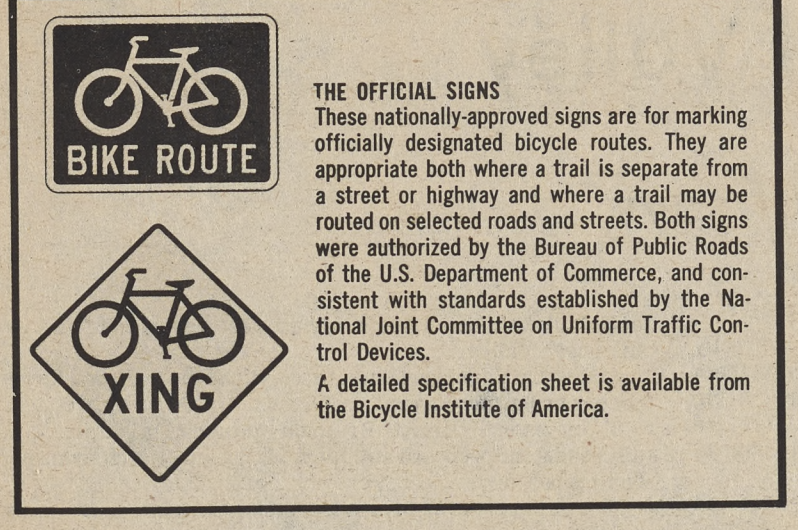

"Still," he added, "there are advantages to the travelling public to get these bicycles off the roads so they won't be a danger to automobile traffic. So of course there's no reason why bicycles can't make use of the paved shoulders."

Jose said that along Carmel Valley road drainage presents a problem in many locations, and in some spots there is almost no room for a shoulder because of steep hillsides.

As a general policy, he said, the road department recommends putting in eight foot shoulders "as funds permit."

Jose said that personally he would rather see an 8-foot dirt shoulder than four foot paved shoulder, if these were the only alternatives, because a good dirt shoulder would provide the necessary emergency space for automobiles. He acknowledged that dirt would not have the advantages of pavement for bicycles and pedestrians.

THE OFFICIAL SIGNS

These nationally-approved signs are for marking officially designated bicycle routes. They are appropriate both where a trail is separate from a street or highway and where a trail may be routed on selected roads and streets. Both signs were authorized by the Bureau of Public Roads of the U.S. Department of Commerce, and consistent with standards established by the National Joint Committee on Uniform Traffic Control Devices.

A detailed specification sheet is available from the Bicycle Institute of America.

NATIONWIDE INTEREST

The idea of providing specific routes for bicycles has been gaining nationwide popularity in recent years. Extensive, interconnected systems of bike paths are now being planned for San Francisco and Marin County, and many suburban areas are marking bike lanes along well-travelled residential streets.

New York City reserves Central Park for people and bicycles only on Sundays, and cyclists are now trying to get a Sunday-only route open to them on the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge.

The state of Wisconsin is criss-crossed by more than 300 miles of designated bike routes which take cyclists through cities and towns along back roads. Thousands of tourists visit every summer for a "Wisconsin Bicycle Holiday."

The fact is, bicycles are enjoying an all-time peak in popularity, and there is no sign the trend is tapering off. In the past 10 years, sales have doubled. Last year there were 5,089,023 U.S.-made bikes and 1,970,528 imported bikes sold throughout the nation.

The boom has been felt locally, where two large Peninsula bike dealers reported last week that they can't get enough bicycles to meet the demand.

"Sales of three, five and ten speed bycycles are out of this world. We can't get our hands on enough. They're sold before we see them," said one big bike dealer.

While bike sales used to be a strictly seasonal thing for children for Christmas, now the demand is intense year-round. Kids bikes continue to be best-sellers, but now there is equal demand for light-weight adult models.

WITH NO PAVED SHOULDER TO CALL THEIR OWN, cyclists Frank Saulsbury, Tod Weir and Steve Chaney, left, bike along the white line running along the northern side of Carmel Valley Road. Even at that, they are probably better off than the two unidentified girls above, who are trying to get through the Village without mishap.

Oct. 22 and all prospective donors are urged to take note as the need is particularly great at this time. The Community Theatre is offering five pairs of tickets to donors holding the lucky numbers at the Bloodmobile which will entitle the winners to see "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?"

Burglaries up 27% in Carmel Valley

'Honest citizens' contribute to problem, sheriff says

Burglaries in Carmel Valley are up 27 percent over last year, Sheriff Jack Davenport told the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce last week.

The sheriff's patrol has been increased to try to curb the problem, but it won't be easy.

There were 126 cases reported in all of 1969, and during the first nine months of 1970 there were already 109, with a projected total of 161 for the year.

Of these, 50 percent are in the Village area. Why? Davenport said that there are a number of factors favoring the burglar. These are isolation, above average homes, spying on and casing a prospective 'hit' is easy, and people are frequently gone for long periods.

The most frequently stolen items are color TV sets, stereos, cameras, weapons and binoculars -- all items for which there is a ready 'market'.

And who buys a lot of these hot items?

Davenport says many honest citizens buy them innocently, and congratulates themselves for 'getting a bargain'. This makes the problem even harder to solve.

DRUG ADDICTS

Many of these crimes, the sheriff believes, are directly traceable to drug addicts whose habit frequently costs them $50 to $100 a day. And since Carmel Valley is near a big transient population -- those using Highway 1 -- there are bound to be many narcotic users who find it convenient to burglarize homes here.

Thefts are up over 10 percent over a year ago and malicious mischief up by 30 percent. But other types of crimes are, in general, following the pattern of previous years.

Davenport said that six deputies patrol the Valley, divided over the three shifts each day.

But the biggest problem is narcotics, and marijuana. Marijuana has reached the point, he said, where it no longer can be solved by police. People of all kinds are using it, and as such is a wide-ranging social problem. But when he asked for a show of hands among the 30 people present, almost all of them were against legalizing pot.

Shoplifting is also a major problem in the Valley -- in fact half of all the cases in the county are reported here, mostly in the lower Valley.

And as the Valley develops, there will be more crime. More people bring more social problems.

Supervisor Willard Branson joined Davenport in discussing the proposed anti-hitch-hiking law, which Branson has proposed.

This has become highly controversial, because, as Branson pointed out, it has to be non-descriminatory. The only reservation may be that it would apply only to major highways, such as Highway 1.

Branson said that he would appear at the Nov. 5 Chamber meeting and discuss this proposed law at greater length.

105 MEMBERS

The chamber now has 105 members, Raz Belleci, treasurer, reported.

The group also discussed the need for a new color brochure, since the present supply is about exhausted. Lou Gardner is coordinating the work involved in developing a new brochure.

1971 VW SUPER BEETLE

Don't let its enduring beauty fool you.

For 1971 we've almost doubled the front trunk space. We've reinforced the front bumper. Developed a new flow-through ventilation system to keep air circulating. Installed a new front suspension system you have to feel to believe; lengthened the wheelbase; decreased the turning radius; and increased the horsepower. Oh yes, we've also radically restyled it.

But other than that, it's still the same ol' dependable beetle.
